

"SIR, THE ingratitude of the Sieur Tichio, who now goes by the title of Count Cagliastro, added to my immediate necessity for money, obliges me to communicate to the public one of his adventures, which he has omitted to insert in his Memoirs. You mention him in one of your numbers as a man of brutal character, who treats his wife very cruelly. It is really surprising that the lesson he received at Vienna, about the latter end of the year 1775, has not made a greater impression upon him. One day in the month of November, in that year, as he was walking with this unfortunate woman on the banks of the Danube, where the current rushed with the most rapid force, he took an opportunity to pick a quarrel with her upon one subject or other; and on her attempting to excuse or justify herself, he fell into a sudden rage and seized her round the waist threw her into the river, with such force, that she fell into the water above ten yards distant from the shore. Those who were spectators of this barbarous action, wished in vain to give her assistance. The current carried her away with such rapidity, that she disappeared in a minute. Tichio was immediately taken into custody. Thirty witnesses appeared to prove the fact, and upon whose testimony he was clearly convicted and received sentence to be hanged. As Surgeon of the prison, I had opportunity to see him: He appeared to me to be a stout well set matuline man, and I thought him a good subject for dissection. Accordingly sent for the executioner, and struck a bargain with him for the corps at the sum of fifty florins; which was double the usual price given for the bodies of ordinary malefactors. On the 28th of November, Tichio was hanged; and three or four hours after the execution, the body was brought to my house. I was then delivering a course of Lectures on Anatomy, and having placed the corpse on the amphitheatre, in the presence of all my pupils, I pronounced a scientific discourse on the causes of death in hanged persons; after which, proceeding to the dissection of the subject before me, I made a deep incision from the sternum to the axilla. Tichio instantly roared out, and set himself upright on the table. My pupils terrified almost to death made towards the door; but I stopped them, and having persuaded them to return and keep the secret, I stitched up the wound, I bled my patient, I purged him. In short, in 15 days I put him on his legs again. For two whole months I kept him closely concealed in my house; during which time he often mentioned his wife, spoke of her virtue in the strongest terms, and appeared quite inconsolable for the loss of her.

"One day when he was reproaching himself with more than ordinary bitterness for having been the cause of her death, who should rush into the apartment but Madam Tichio? and throwing her arms about his neck, they both remained a considerable time fixed in embraces of mutual transport. It seems the day after the accident happened to her, Madam Tichio was found by a fisherman 15 leagues from Vienna, a country surgeon, by clysters of tobacco and repeated fumigations happily restored her to life, and effected her recovery. Fortune could have it that the son of this very woman was one of my pupils, and had been present at Tichio's refurection. Madam Tichio in confidence possessed him of the secret of her deplorable disaster, and the young man in return acquainted her with every circumstance of the hanging, dissection and cure of her husband. She had the generosity not only to forgive but to live with him again. At their departure together from hence, I furnished them with what was necessary for their journey. Tichio on taking his leave, with all possible shew of gratitude, assured me that as soon as in his power, he would simply reimburse me the money I advanced; the price of his board, &c. at my house; payment for my care and attendance, and also the 50 florins which I had paid for his body. But, Sir, it appears clearly that Tichio has quite forgot me since become Count Cagliastro. They tell me here that there is an excellent law in England, by virtue of which a person totally unknown, without house, settlement, or even a possibility of being afterwards traced, may without any title, or giving any securities for the prosecution of his claim, upon his own sole unsupported affidavit of debt, imprison a citizen or denizen provisionally, or make him find bail in double the demand. Pray be so good as to let me know how the laws stand in such case. If I find my informations right, I shall set out for England immediately on the receipt of your answer. Yours &c.

J. TUSCOFFEE."

TORTOSE, (France) Dec. 25. A woman, wife of one John Agratone, being with child, and hearing that one of her children had been apprehended with some disorderly person, and sent to prison, was so affrighted as to be instantly taken in labour, and was delivered of five children, four girls and a boy. This woman has had 14 children at four births, 2 the first, 3 the second, 4 the third, and now five, all of whom are living and in good health.

From a Rhode Island paper. An Apocryphal Anecdote.

AFTER the General Assembly of Rhode-Island had negated the motion for requesting the Governor to issue a proclamation against the Massachusetts rebels, Dr. Samuel Willard of Uxbridge, in that state, who is one of the persons mentioned in the proclamation of the Governor of New-Hampshire, as guilty of treason against the state of Massachusetts, appeared at Little Rest Hill, and was admitted to a seat in the Assembly. Thus encouraged, he had the audacity, at a tavern, to endeavour to poison and inflame the minds of the people by his sedition discourse. A Providence gentleman, who heard the traitor, attacked him, rent his clothes, and would have torn his flesh if he had not been protected and put out of the way by two men, one of whom was a fiery paper money man, and the other the most consummate villain in this state. It is said, that this Willard intended to have petitioned the General Assembly for protection against the state to which he belongs; but matters being not quite ripe enough, he was obliged to drop his design.—How effeminate is a free state, and how federal is the conduct of this state.

STRAYED or Stolen from the Subscriber, on the night of the 25th of March last, a dark Bay HORSE, 8 or 9 years old, lately trim'd, a large forehead, main lies the off side, and out off even with his neck, his hind legs crooked, some white spots under the saddle, carries his head high, has good life, but some white hairs under his eye, paces altogether stout all round, too cooked before. Whoever will take up said horse and return him to the subscriber, or give information where he may be had, shall receive a handsome reward, and all necessary charges paid. DANIEL PRATT.
