Treasury Office, Buston, June 25, 1788.

LONDON, April 14.
The trial of Mr. Haftings "drags its # w length along," and will congers for this year, at least; E skine has been heard to fit, that it may be protracted by due course of law, for four or five years; and indeed, an evidence that coft fourteen yea s in collecting cannot be supposed to be examinable in as thany months.

On Saturday David Clearey, a taylor and faleiman, the corner of Little Pulte. pry-fireet, who had lately infured his flock in trade, household goods, plate, &c. for gool, in the Sun Fire Office, was tried at the old Bailey on an indictment for fetting fire to his faid house, which was consumed together with part of the house of Mr. John Imrey, adjoining; there was found emongst the ruins a Jarge chest filled with hay band, oiled paper, and other combuftibles, and it appeared on the trial, that he fermed to have but a very indifferent flock of trade, and little or no plate, no part of which either whole or melted, was difcovered among the ruins. The profecu. traveller, and a man verfed in taking fur- the piece of the window frame was drove an was carried on by the Sun Bire Infu. veys of towns, he had a complete view of into the opposite wall, and must have par-

The principle had no been fool, in bank notes (ten of which were received at Court, fuch as he was win five pound notes of the bank of England) a large quantity of nankeen, filks &c. all THEODORE SEDGWICK, Speaker, of which were in a box, but the box being found, contained only hay bands, oiled round; contained only may panus, one of the French Manarch; the Colonelation paper, coals, and other combuftles and it of the French Manarch; the Colonelation paper, coals, and other computies and it of the King that his Profits Might issued any five pound notes. The jury brought in their verdict, Guilly-Death. The Recorder, in a folemn address, commanded the prifoner to prepare for death, as he could have no hopes of a pardon.

A few days ago, a clergyman well known, and generally respected in Hun-tingdonshire, committed the horrid act of fuicide; and in order the more effectually to complete his purpole, after cutting his throat, ftabbed himfelf in the breatt, and near the groin, with a large carving knife, which he forced upwards with fuch violence that it went through the heart.

The motive of this desperate act is faid to have been an apprehension of bring re. partment. The inhuman verethes age duced to indigence, though he was in reality in good circumftances; and at the moment of perpetrating it he conceived that bailiffs had actually entered the houle and therefore quitting his wife, to whom he related his rerrors, he arole from bed, and killed himfelf to escape this imaginary purfeit.

A brother and fifter of this gentleman have ended their lives in a fimilar manner, fo that it is probable that fomething of in-fanity pervades the family.

That as a great variety of fortunes of ten attend upon obscure characters as are attributed to heroes of comance, the following sketch of the life of one of the few remaining feamen that attended Lord Anfon's voyage will partly evince. PROVIDENCE, June 26.

On Tuesday morning last, the eastern post brought the very interesting and important intelligence, that the state of New-Hampfbire had, on the Saturday preceding adopted the proposed constitution whereby the ftructure of the national government was completed and the Federal edifice firmly established on nine glorious pillars. The joy of the people burit forth like a blaze, catching from breaft to breaft, until it pervaded the whole town; and it was impossible to restrain the most publick teltimonials of their fatisfaction. All the bells were fat ringing, and continued the joyful peal, with but short intermissions, through the day. At twelve o'clock a falute was fired, by the United train of artillery, on Federal hill; in honour of the flares which had adopted the conflitution; which was leveral times repeated in the course of the day. All the schools were difmified for the day; and general congra-tulation, diffusing the most fincere jouisance among all ranks fucceeded. The wavering and feveral of those who have heretofore appeared against the constitution; now heartily joined in the general joy; which federacy, it is hoped the people thereof will from be fo convinced of it as to call a convention, agreeably to the recommendation of Congress, for adding the Rhade Island pillar ; .-- which, though among the imalleft, may yet be confidered as not the leaft deferving, when a little more of its Antifederalism shall be rubbed off, and its genbine intrinsick worth appear,
