

MATRIMONIAL DEAFNESS.

TWO ears at a time are too many for use,
As they're only the outlets of life;
And some may be found, who (tho' wife) would refuse,
To peep these fair organs of life.

This deafness oft times of advantage is found,
Misfortune may turn into a blessing
When none else dictates, or when trouble abounds,
They then lose their force of disturbing.

I wifely am taught to be deaf with one ear,
While the other for use I employ;
One gate I shut up against trouble and care,
And the other keep open for joy.

When my comfort begins her windpipe to clear,
With peals that would rend worlds asunder,
E'erly I fit and cock up my deaf ear,
Unto'd amidst the roar of thunder.

T'other day comes a dun, with "Sir, you well know;"
"What say you?—See a little a little;"
"You know Sir, you borrowed full twelve months ago."
"Aha! friend! I can't hear a little."

"You owe me TWENTY POUNDS!"—much louder he cries,
And repeats it as strong as he can;
Then I point to my ears, and flare with my eyes,
Till he scarcely believes me the man.

I brave as a Don, cry "My hearing's quite lost!"
"And my money," says he too I fear;
"Put on him! 'tis folly to talk a past;"
So he leaves me mad as a hare.

Thus my life, night and day, in soft indolence flows,
Scolding, chiding, nor brawling I fear;
We married men all then, that with for repose,
Mind, and always be deaf with one ear.

A MARRIED MAN.

From the AMERICAN MAGAZINE.
Extracts from a letter written by Mr. John Ledyard to Dr. Ledyard, of Queen's County, Long-Island.

It may be necessary to inform the reader, that Mr. John Ledyard was one who accompanied Capt. Cook in his voyage round the world. After his return, he formed a design of travelling round the world by land. By the influence of the French minister, Count Vergennes, he obtained the countenance of the Empress of Russia through whose dominions he purposed to pass. He had actually traversed the vast regions of the north, through Russia, Siberia, and almost to the Pacific ocean; when through the jealousy of the Russian court, he was arrested by an officer dispatched for the purpose, hurried back through a country of six thousand miles extent, to the borders of Poland, and banished the Russian empire. He arrived in London the last summer, where he was introduced to a company of nobility and gentlemen, who wished to find a person willing to undertake to explore the interior parts of Africa. Mr. Ledyard immediately engaged in the hazardous enterprise, the society have advanced a sum of money to defray the expenses, and this bold traveller is now on his way through France to Alexandria, Grand Cairo, the banks of the Red Sea, and thence southward through the heart of Africa.

While this gentleman was in London, he wrote to his friend, giving some account of his travels, from which are extracted the following particulars.

The two following observations are the result of extensive and judicious enquiry. First, that the diversity of colour in the human species, as the observation respects, is not the Negroes, whom I have not yet visited, originals from natural causes.

The second is, that all the Asiatic Indians, called Tartars, and all the Tartars that have formed the later armies of Zingis Chan, together with the Chinese, are the same people, and that the American Tarras (so he calls the natives) are all of the family: The most ancient and numerous people on earth, and what is very singular, the most uniformly alike.

You have no idea of the excessive cold in the region of Siberia. By experiments I made at Yakutsk, I found on the 19th of Nov. the mercury in my thermometer froze. In Dec. I found by repeated observations, that two ounces of clear quicksilver, openly exposed, froze hard in fifteen minutes by a watch. In strong Cossick brandy, congealed by a thermometer graduated by Reaumur, and filled with rectified spirit of wine, I had 30 degrees. On the borders of the frozen ocean, a Capt. Billings had the winter before last 47 degrees by the same thermometer. I observed that in these severe frosts, the air was condensed, as is with you in a thick fog—the atmosphere is frosty—respiration is fatiguing—all exercise must be as moderate as possible—ones confidence is placed in the fur cloths above. It is a happy law of nature that in such intense cold, there is seldom any wind—when there is, it is dangerous to be abroad: Those who happen to be, lie down on the snow and thus secure themselves. In these seasons there is no chase—the animals submit themselves to hunger and security, and so does man. There are no wells at Yakutsk, for it is found by experiment that the water freezes at 60 feet depth. People of these regions therefore are obliged to use ice and snow. They have also ice windows—glaziers of no use to the few who have it; the difference in the rate of the air, within and without, is great, that the glass is covered on the inside with several inches of ice, and in that situation, it is less luminous than the sun. On the banks of the great river Lena, which falls into the frozen sea, ice: The timber of the houses splits and opens with loud cracks—the river thunder and opens with broad fissures—all nature groans beneath the rigorous winter. Just at the turning of this cold season, I travelled last winter 2600 verds, about 1600 English miles, on the river Lena.
