Worthy of diffication's meetas.
Thou can't give me gloomy care,
Thou can't give me mad defpair,
And the fures haunt the firme
Where Bacchar revels curse with wine.
Let note grove and good, but love,
Dare to praife thy blading power:
Let took po from lacid rills,
Drink that fome fair cloud diffile. Drink that tome rait cloud duming Their's be water, free from care, Their's is joy, not mad depair: Far from this blatphemous thrine, Far from horror, far from wins, Far from horror, far from wine,
Ler me ever hereremain,
Amidft the furfed, haggard train;
Rair' Voice is here well known,
Warr: Alarm and Mijer; groanHere I cling to fallow Care,
To Keny pele, and mad Defair:
Ever near this baleful finite,
Give me Slevery, Hatt and Wine.

From the AMERICAN DAILY ADVERTISER. I speak that which I know, and tellify that which I have feen.

Meffrs. PRINTERS, THE impartial remarks on wives, contained in one of your late papers, in duce me to give a fhort account of my life, in confirmation of them. The gentleman ferms to write from observation; but I can al-fure him that I fpeak/from experience.

In my youth I was often told that I was handfome—an angel—all perfections, that my will ought to be a law to the man I approved. All this; to be fure; was every civil, and what gentlemen use to say to ladies. Nor is it realonable to imagine that fuch language can produce any other effect than a great efreem for those who use it. While we are young, it is not to be supposed that our experience will fuffer us to believe a fyllable of it.

I foon grew attached to one of thele oblequious gentlemen; and, to make there of the Rory, we were married. For two or three month I was indeed his darling—I never was lefs than his dear. I full tried to pinfue the fame conduct which formerly had made me an angel. But unfortunately I loft all my understanding and perfection at once: Be-cause my husband always proved to our ac-quaintance, that I did not even know how to order a pudding; when to go abroad or fray at home; nor how to dress my two daughters. What was worle than all through his perpetual opposition to my will in the most minute manner, and his kind remarks were all deligned for my good, I had loft the fenfe of perceiving it, and was ever chagrined with his benovolence. - Cruel death firstched away this indulgent spouse.

In a few months my reason happily returned; my delicate fense of propriety was as great as ever i and I again became an angelia goddels; and was again entertained with the fame language I had been accultomed to when a girl. I was not however quite fo credulous as I had been. But I was fo often told of my hard heartedness and cruelty shar I at last confented to marry again; not without fome apprehension that I might once be deprived of my reason. I nevertheless thought it better to run this risque than to be eruel, for I always believed that whatever fanlis we had as women, we were never famous for this imperfection.

The event proved that my apprehenfions were not groundless. My reason fled, and I was a second time an idiot. For though I brought a large ellate, I was not deemed ca-pable of spending a lingle farthing of it with prudence; no, not to buy a pound of butter. My fourie was so good natured and obliging that he would never trouble me with a penny. Because it would fatigue me to ley it out. I have

I was fully convinced of his ability to manage my effate, fince, when I married him he had never ten pounds at once at his difforal in his life, though I made him mafter of four thousand. But some how or other I obtained fifty pounds-I shudder to relate it! In a hit of phrenfy I fpent it all in clothing myfelf and daughters. The lofs of it broke his heart, and he died.

A few years elapfed and I was prevailed upon to marry a grave old gentleman who had often faid I was endowed with charm fufficient to engage a youth of lifteen. I did not fully believe him, but refolved to make one experiment more before. I also died.

I found him very affectionate after he had been (as he expressed it) at the tavern on bufinels. This often happened; and I shall carry fome tokens of his love to the day of my death. Three ribs broken byta clubfeven fears on my head and face with the tongs and his cane, are most lasting marks of attachment. And yet I was frequently furth a fool as to run away from these tendar embraces; nay, more—I confess it with fhame, I did worfe; I struck him with his cane, when he was rendering me due benevolence our the shoulders with a fire shovel. This was ingrantude—But what will not the perversenels of women abule & misconstrue!—Icould carily tell you of forme hundreds of women who have been treated as mildly, and who have behaved as ungratefully as I have done: But being now a third time a widow, tho' folicited to do it, I have relolved never more to torment any of the gentle, finnocent and indulgent men with fo refractious, turbulent and vile a thing as a woman.

Hence, my good friend, you may fee that the women are evidently not blamed without a just cause; they are always obstinate and il natured from the badness of their hearts in fentible as affes, and plagues to the world!

—that the men are feldom in the fault;
that Solomon and all who have to do with us, were arrant fools for meddling with fuch ferpents; and that none but old bachelors can have any just pretentions to good nature, reason and humanity.
