

FROM every part of my extensive reign, Let legions march to throng each Turkish plain; The die is cast—all party I rebgn, And either Death or Slambol shall be mine.

King of PRUSSIA. Hal! say you to I Pretentious CATHERINE cease, Nor further seek to buff! Europe's Peace; If fill you dare, I loon shall let you know, How easy 'tis to bring a woman low.

King of SWEDEN. Not quite so easy friend as you may think, Danger I've oft defy'd and scorn'd to shrink; But to my cost have found, do what I can, That Catherine can beat the bravest man.

Grand SEIGNIOR. Had news for me I'll now begin to quake, And feel the earthquake on my forehead shake; O! MAMOUR! befriend me in this hour, Nor let me fall beneath a woman's power.

King of GREAT-BRITAIN. Take courage Sir, my armies loon shall sweep, In your behalf the Hellespont deep; Nor can a second strament prove dear, Confiding what a trifle went last year!

Prince of ORANGE. George, I will aid you in so just a cause, And hinder KATE to give old EUROPE laws; But, what says DENMARK, who you not employ, Your force with ours the VIKES to assay?

King of DENMARK. Faith, BILL, I cannot well tell what to do, For danger waits each plan I take in view.

ing each other, may draw in an even yoke. While he who inverts this order, and begins at the other end, finds at length that he has been fattening up luxury to prepare it a meat offering for starving necessity. You believe that an income of twenty pounds a quarter, with the produce of our farm, may afford me a new coat every six months. If you would confine the expensive simply to this garment, I grant your calculation is within the truth; but you will expect a new gown as often. Here me wife interrupted, to inform me that it was an established prerogative of the ladies to change their modes and dresses at least four times as often as the gentlemen. Do you see yonder couple, said I, leaning upon his crutch? He bubbles it highly well. You see in that object the helps which nature receives from art; but you likewise see that the weaker only have recourse to them.

truff to Thomas Cox, Alexander Mather, and Henry Moore, to be still employed in teaching and maintaining the children of poor travelling preachers. I give to Thomas Cox, Dr. John Whitehead, and Henry Moore all the books which are in my study and bedchamber at London, and in my studies elsewhere, in trust for the use of the preachers who shall labor there from time to time. I give the coin, and whatever else is in the drawers, of my bureau at London, to my dear grand daughter Mary and Jane Smith: I give all my manuscripts to Thomas Cox, Dr. J. Whitehead, and H. Moore, to be burnt or published as they see good. I give whatever money remains in my purses or pockets, at my decease to be equally divided between Thomas Brisco, William Collins, John Erskoe, and James Brown. I desire my gowns, calicoes, laces, and bands, may remain at the Chapel, for the use of the Clergymen attending there. I desire the London Assize for the time being, to divide the rest of my wearing apparel between those four of the travelling preachers that want it most; my only pelisse, I give to the Rev. Mr. Creighton; my watch to my friend, Joseph Bradford; my gold seal to James Ward, and I give my chain and hanger to James Ward, and Charles Wheeler, in trust, to be sold and the money divided, one half to Hannah Abbot, and the other to the poor members of the Select Society. Out of the first money which arises from the sale of books, I bequeath to my dear friend, Martha Hall (if alive) forty pounds, to Mr. Creighton aforesaid fifty pounds, and to the Rev. Mr. Heath, fifty pounds. And whereas I am empowered by a late deed to name the persons who are to preach in the New-Chapel, London, I do hereby appoint John Richardson, Thomas Gage, James Creighton, and Peter Dickson, clerks; Alexander Mather, William Thompson, Henry Moore, Andrew Blair, John Walton, Joseph Bradford, James Rogers, and William Mylne, to preach in the New-Chapel at Bath. I likewise appoint Henry Brooke, painter, Arthur Kneeb, gen. and William Whetstone, Stationer, all of Dublin, to receive the annuity of five pounds (English) left to Kingwood school, by the late Roger Smith, Esq. I give five pounds to be divided among six poor men, named by the Assize, who shall carry my box to the grave; for I particularly desire there may be no benefit, no church, no school, no poor, except the tears of them that love me, and are following me to Abraham's bosom. I solemnly adjure my executor, in the name of GOD, punctually to observe this. Lastly, I give to each of those travelling preachers, who shall remain in the connection, six months, after my decease, as a little token of my love, the eight volumes of Sermons. I appoint John Horton, George Wolford and William Marriot aforesaid, to be executors of this my last WILL and Testament, for which trouble they will receive no recompense till the Redirection of the Jull. Witness my hand and seal, the 20th of February, 1789.

THE NEIGHBOR.

I HAVE often laughed at those precise kind of people, who chronicle, or as some term it, pour-trail their achievements and experiences. If life is but a transient scene, and on the whole, both on the part and the most, we should be contented to leave the disposition, as we find it, and not by making essays and charts we go along, increase our calamities by bringing a population of them forward into new day, which is already furnished.—I have read somewhere sufficient unto the day in the evil thereof, and indeed I have always found it. But as all the knowledge we have, except what we receive by revelation, is originally derived from experience; as futurity has no light but what it borrows from the past and present.

FROM THE WORCESTER GAZETTE.

Do you remember, said Harriot, more angry than ever—do you remember what the prompter says about these do for the present falls? I will get you the new paper, and show you the piece. Do, said I, I have read it however; but it is well worth reading again. There said the, handing the paper, with one finger tracing the column about half way down—somewhere here it is; he has thrown down his neighbor's fence, on purpose to fold at him for not putting it up. And pray what application, said I, will you make of this? If these things, said she are done in the green tree, what will be done in the dry? If the prompter takes too much pains to find fault with old men, what will he say to your coat, when you have worn it among the trees again? You have some times noticed the garden wall, Harriot, as you gathered the ripe cluckers from the vine spread over it? That wall has been built these twenty years; and yet is unbroken; every fence remains in its proper place. Do you think the Prompter would advise me to pull it down and build a new one? When the frost, or some accident, shall have made a gap in it, I will mend it. And you, Harriot, when time and use shall wear a hole in this coat, will like a prudent housewife, take your needle and sew a patch on it.—My husband were patched clothes—I Heavens!

JOHN WESLEY.

I. S. Signed, sealed, and delivered by the said Testators as, for, his said WILL and Testament, in the presence of us, Wm. CULLOW, ELIZABETH CULLOW. Should there be any part of my personal estate, undivided of by this my last WILL, I give the same to my niece, Elizabeth and Sofannah Collet, equally. Witness, J. Wm. CULLOW, J. WESLEY, J. ELIZ. CULLOW.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

Mr. WESLEY, WILL. Extracted from the Registry of the Perogative Court of Canterbury in England. In the name of GOD Amen.

JOHN WESLEY.

PROVED, at London, with two Coadjutors, the 16th day of March, 1791, before the Worshipful George Harris, Doctor of Laws and Surrogate, by the oath of John Horton, Esq. George Wolf, Esq. and William Marriot, the executors named in the WILL, to whom administration was granted, having been first sworn duly to administer.

THE FOLLOWING EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A WELL INFORMED GENTLEMAN IN THE ISLE OF RHODE ISLAND, WILL THROW CONSIDERABLE LIGHT ON A LATE BARBAROUS TRANSACTION COMMITTED BY A CAPTAIN WOLFE, ON AN AFRICAN FEMALE.

THE African female, the murder speaks for itself. A Captain Wolfe, of Bristol, in this state, has lately arrived at Newport from an African voyage, and shows his passage from the Coast to the Cape. In this, he committed a barbarous transaction, which has excited in the people of this state, more aversion, than to any extent that has ever occurred, and will probably awaken their attention to a more accurate enquiry into the general state of the odious commerce.
