

To LADIES & GENTLEMEN.
SHOULD we surrender, soon, our hearts,
The last conquest you disdain,
Yet fail at all our little arts,
And say the maid, SHOULD NEVER FRIGHT.

How wretched, then, is Virgin youth!
Which neither path can safely try;
For Scorn attends our speaking truth,
And Virtue yet forbids to lie.

The GENTLEMEN to the LADIES.
A brave resistance gives renown,
Whilst easily conquest all disdain;
The longer you defend the town,
The greater honour till you gain.

From questions, by ensnaring youth
Propof'd, your wif must tell you fire;
You need not tell us ALL THE TRUTH;
You're on your oaths no more than we.

INSOLENCE REBUKED.

UPSTART insolence never experienced a more humiliating reproof, than in the person of that "Great child of honour," cardinal Wolfe. Lord Sands was a young nobleman, who, among other compliances with the gay vices of the age in which he lived, used to indulge himself in a too frequent and free use of the bottle: one evening, after having spent the greatest part of the day with his cavalier companions, he happened to meet the cardinal; who observing him to be much intoxicated, said, he wondered that he could so debauch the illustrious title he sustained, as to put himself more in the character of a coal porter than a nobleman: adding, that it would be far more commendable in him to employ his money in the discharging of his father's veins, than in wantonly spending it in taverns. His lordship, with affected consternation, immediately replied, "I confess I feel the full force of your grace's just, though severe refection; and to convince you of my good effects, shall instantly set about putting in practice every equitable advice—And first, here is two pence half-penny, which my father the lord owed your grace's father, the butcher for a calf's heart." Every one who is in the least acquainted with the hasty disposition of that aspiring churchman, will readily conceive what he must have felt upon meeting with so poignant and unexpected a sarcasm.

By his Excellency GEORGE CLINTON, Esq. Governor of the State of New-York, General and Commander in Chief of all the Militia, and Admiral of the Navy of the same.
