

From the IMPERIAL INTELLIGENCE.
THE SEASON.
RELENTLESS Boreas now displays his power.
And clouds and storms obscure the face of day;
The frozen earth forbids the fleecy shower,
And leaden fountains o'er dire winters flow.

No blooming verdure decks the distant plain,
No flowery prospects rise to charm the eye;
But winter comes, and tears its algid reign,
And cloudland wind in quick succession fly.

No warbling Linnet greets returning noon,
When day emerges from the shades of night;
No cheerful fongler sings at early dawn,
No sprightly beauties greet our mirth's delight.

O'er hills and dale, o'er distant woods and plains,
Behold the fleecy flocks of snow descend—
The loud streams are bound with icy chains,
And every tree in boned forests bends.

Alas! How late the charms of blooming Spring,
With luscious fruits, and boundless empire held—
While orient flames spread his radiant wing,
O'er blushing meadows night's dull gloom dispell'd.

How late gay Summer, clad in robes of green,
Display'd his charms to our admiring view!
Melodious warblers grac'd the brilliant scene,
And blooming fields a verdant hue:

But later still fair Autumn held its reign,
And boundless plenty grac'd the yellow fields,
White flocks and herds ascend on every plain;
But autumn now to hardy Winter yields.

Thus all the different seasons' various charms
Are lost in Winter, and to dearth constrain'd;
O may this truth expel all false alarms,
Improve the morals, and enrich the mind.

Ye power above, who rule the realms of peace;
Infuse with gratitude my youthful heart;
Bid Sin and Sorrow their dominions cease,
And sweet Contentment new scenes of joy impart.

May classic fates attend my first advance,
And guide my footsteps to maturer age;
Rependant knees illumine the wide expanse,
And brightening prospects misery's power assuage.

That when the springlike days of youth are past,
And summer far: exult in middle age,
Virtue may rear its reign within my breast,
And felicitous thoughts my tranquil mind engage.

I'll then, with joy, when wintry storms fill drives,
Obey the mandate of our heavenly King;
And life forego—when hope to live,
And bloom again in ever verdant Spring.

Caillard, (Ver.) Jan. 10, 1792.

The SLEIGH:
A new Song.
Tune—"A Hunting we will go."

HARK! how the youth invites the maid,
Health's charms to obey;
In garments white and fair array'd,
She haunts the useful SLEIGH.

To exertive by pleasures led,
No fears her bosom sway
The horses part the snow to tread,
And whirl the rapid SLEIGH.

Those cheeks, which late the lilly graced,
The Nothing else display;
No hoars in flush may beauty waste,
But blest the genial SLEIGH!

The Sire, the matron, and the young,
Should rise without delay;
And own Health's blessings must belong
To those who fill the SLEIGH.

Now appetite in joys imports,
And e'er the clove of day,
They all confer, with grateful hearts,
The blessing of the SLEIGH.

From health may affection ne'er
Our bosoms lead astray;
And chiefly may the prudent fair
Apprehend the genial SLEIGH.

MATERNAL AFFECTION.

A NATIVE of Guinea fold his wife, who had not been delivered above a month of twins. She was put in the hold among the rest of the slaves; but it happened to be fine weather, the vessel had not failed above a league, before the slaves were all ordered upon deck, and passed in review before the master. This poor mother irresistibly impelled by her affection for her children, intently threw herself into the sea, determined still to nourish her babes, or perish in the attempt. The Captain crew let fly a shower of balls at her; but heaven favoured her heroic attempt, and she got to shore unhurt.

LAW ANECDOTE.
UPON a trial, at London, in a horse cause, a poor fellow was called a swine, whose business it was to buy dead dogs and horses. The celebrated Mingay, in order to abate the man, and render his evidence as ineffectual as possible, which was against his client, asked how he could pretend to know any thing about horses when he had only to cut them up. "And," says the Counsel, "I suppose you would cut me up or any other man up, if you had us in your power." The fellow replied, "That when he was at his business, it indeed made but little odds to him, whether he cut up Asses or Horses."
This occasioned a hearty laugh, at the expense of the Lawyer.

ANECDOTE.
WHEN some emigrants from Ireland were travelling through the country not long since, a woman of the company having been some what indisposed, called at a clergyman's house and requested to be taken into the Church the next Sabbath; for, "she did not choose," she said, "to live like a dog, and die like a dog, all the days of her life."

Proceedings of Congress.
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES of the UNITED STATES.
Thursday, Jan. 20.

ON motion, a committee was appointed to inquire and report whether any, and what alterations they be expedient to make, in the organization of the Treasury and War departments.

The house took up the report of the committee of the whole on the message from the President of the United States, relative to the formation of the western territories, on which the door was kept open till 12 o'clock. The house being opened, Mr. Fitzsimons moved in relation to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the finances of the United States, which enabled the legislature to judge if any additional supplies will be necessary in consequence of the proposed increase of the military establishment, which was agreed to by the house.

Friday, Jan. 20.
Sundry petitions were read praying, severally, for settlement of accounts, payment of balances, allowance of pensions, compensations, &c.—these were referred to the heads of departments.

Mr. Parker then moved that the consideration of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury on the petition of Catherine Greene, should be referred by the committee of the whole—which motion was agreed to—and Mr. Livermore took the chair.

Mr. Parker then moved that the consideration of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury on the petition of Catherine Greene, should be referred by the committee of the whole—which motion was agreed to—and Mr. Livermore took the chair.

Monday, Jan. 21.
A letter from the Comptroller of the Treasury was read, including a statement of the extra expenses, not allowed, incurred by the Commissioners appointed to deal with the Creek nation.

Sundry petitions for pensions, compensations, &c. were read and referred.

The order of the day being called for, on the report of the Secretary of the Treasury on the petition of Catherine Greene, several members objected to taking up this business, being of a private nature, while matters of the greater public importance demand the immediate attention of Congress. The question being put, the motion for putting into a committee of the whole on this business was carried, 21 to 16—and Mr. Livermore took the chair.

After a lengthy debate, the question was put, for agreeing to the first resolution, in the following words:—
Resolved, as the opinion of this committee, that the estate of the late Major general Greene ought to be indemnified for the engagements entered into by that General, with certain persons in the State of South Carolina, for the purpose of obtaining supplies for the army of the United States, under his command, in the year 1783. Which was negatived, 28 to 15.

The committee then rose, and the chairman reported, that the committee of the whole house, had under consideration a report of the Secretary of the Treasury, on the petition of Catherine Greene—and had come to an resolution thereon.

Mr. Macon then moved that the committee of the whole should be discharged, from any further proceedings on the subject—which motion was agreed to.

Mr. Bourne then laid on the table a resolution for referring the Secretary's report, together with Mr. Green's petition, and the vouchers accompanying it, to a select committee, with authority to inquire into the facts which rendered it necessary for Gen. Greene to borrow security to Banks and Co., and the nature, circumstances, and amount of the original debt, and the obligations entered into by Gen. Greene for payment thereof; with an account of the monies or collateral security received by the obligees, or by Gen. Greene in his life time, or his representatives since his death, in part thereof, and the eventual loss which he shall sustain in consequence of the said facts, and after examining all the circumstances, and such further evidence as may be offered relative thereto, to report their opinion thereon to the house.
