REMARKS ON DUBLIANG.

Taken from Dr. Bury's New But of Edgy,

If in defence of Duelling it be afferred, that the practice of it prevents bad manners and preferred good, it is in that view but held out as a fort of birch or bugit is in that view but hold out as a fort of birch or bog-beat to angility boys and feldom rectifies the principle, good amide require it not: and bad oner are feldom-amended by it. For thefe laft prefume on the experi-ence of pair rencounters, which, while it hardem and familiarizes them to finch danger, gives them at the fame time fixil and feperiunty in the practice; shat hence denies, in a great degree, what is often urged in forphort of Duelling, that it is, to both parties I fair mode of defence—But the grand objection of all this is, that this mode of redrefs firsters at the very root of joilier.

Correction was not intended for the innocent but for the guilty. Duelling makes no difficultion; nor can it diffirminate between them; it points vengeance to both, and equally expoles both to a violent and insended.
