The breach of the conditation by the Jacobins would not have been fufficient to have 1sd him to abandon his country; but the command being taken from him by the raling party, put it out of his power to be any longer ferviceable, especially as his attest was de-creed, which might be followed by a trial, condemnation, and perhaps death. An attempt to, fif to this commity as an alclum would be extremely natural in country as an afglom would be extremely nature fach circumstances and not unworthy of himfelf.

He will be frasted with buseriby of himlell. He will be frasted with busanity by the delpots in whole tands he has fallen; not fo if the emigrant had him in their power.
