ON THE EDUCATION OF YOUTH, IN AMERICA.

From Noar Webstra's Effort

But the principal elects and plan of education in America, is, the wift of good teachers in the academies and common-febrols. But your reschools are proported. fohools. By good teachers I mean, men of unplemished reputation, and possessed of abilities, competent to their stations. The a man should be master of what he and estates to reach, is a point that will not be disputed; and yet it is certain, that abilities are often dispensed with, either through instruction or feat of expense.

dispended with, either through institution or feat of expende.

To those who employ ignorant men to influed their children, permit me to fogged one important idea : that it is better for quarth to have no education, than to hive a bad one; for it is more difficult to cradicate thabits, than to impress more ideal; Tieder families scally but to any food but the tree, which has acquired its full grown, refits all impressors.

Yet abilities are not the fole requisites. The influeders of youth ought, of all men, to be the most product, arcomplished, agreeable, and refrectable. What avail a man parts, if, while he is the "witch and brighted; "he is the "mannel of manifel and brighted;" he is the "mannel of manifel on the minds of youth will probably be acknowledged; but with a view to impress the control of the permitting of the view of mannel of manifel on the minds of youth will probably be acknowledged; but with a view to im-
