Their depen-dence, in the sime of the war was not on a-ny energy in Congress, nor on any friend-y disposition a great many of the commu-nity hore towards them. It was your tr-peated general orders to them, your po-parted general orders to them, your ponity bore towards them. It was your special general orders to them, your special general orders to them, your special general in the middle of winter, and the sold freza month's pay would not partially when whither. It was the almost immortal light whilker. It was the almost immorral light in which they viewed you, the incomparable love they had for you, the veneration, refact and adoration they paid you, that made themencounter more difficult and dif-ficulties than any other army ever did for the rights and liberties of the human race; therefore, to you General Wathington therefore, to you depend wantington, while they are experiencing works than Guthick barbarity, they now look for relief; they have a just right foto do; from you, fir, they furely have a right to claim yourinflacace towards the accomplishment of that juffice which you so often and so of that yelice which you is often and to foleminy pledged your word and hoost, as commander in chief, that they finoid re-cive; and if the enfining Congreto neglects or denies doing them judice, there will be formething more to feer than a breach of neutrality or wellern favages. The expond to yo often intrated may at 18th become in-corable; and how refly awful and melan-tholy does it among, no fee the levellature

of the bewailing widow, the diffrelled or-phan, and the ruined, heart broken patriot. It is not only the same, but every true re-publican's breast in America, that panes for an end to thefe iniquitous, eruel and unjult fufferings.

In fir, in, and hape eyer thall have reston to be, with the most exalted femiment of respectivous spaces well wither and obedi-

choly does it appear, to fee the legiflaute of a nation, with impensity, look on such injuffice, and wantonly make sport of the most hombie entreptice and reass for justice
