

the hands of a virtuous young man, who had planted the tree of liberty, and who is now dead of his wounds.

"At the village of Steinwald, these unchristian cutters, the heralds of a mother who is sucking her child.

"At the village of Barthelot, these execrable cannibals murdered, in the arms of their afflicted husband, a young woman fair youth gone with child.

"At the village of Caudé, these ruffians murdered an infant and two labourers. "In all the villages to which they have been able to penetrate, they have marked their course by murder and pillage."

"Men, feeling and generous, who mourn over the evils of the human race, mark the deplorable effects of the scourge of war. Would you annihilate forever the destructive force of battles; rise as one man; arm & join the intrepid defenders of the Republic. As long as Kings and tyrants shall exist, by whatever name they may be called, the earth will always weep with the blood and the tears of unfortunate men. Let us exterminate Kings and Royalty. Let us root out Tyranny. Let us cut off from the number of the living, the vile satellites, who will not be our brothers."

"THIS act has been communicated to the Plenipotentiary of the French Republic; and it is by his orders that I am again charged to declare to you, that he does not acknowledge its validity, and that he orders me to solicit again of you the most severe scrutiny of the crime of which Citizen DUPLAISNE is accused, in order that he may be punished by his sovereign, if he be guilty."

"I request then, Sir, very earnestly, in the name of the French Nation, of Justice and of Liberty, that the most formal and solemn Enquiry may be fully made in this State, of the motives of that Danton, and into the legal forms which ought to have preceded it.

"I beg of you, in the mean time, that, in executing my orders, I may deposit in your hands, "my Protest against this impediment of the Executive power of the United States, against the sovereignty of the French Government, tends to introduce into their rule of conduct a principle of fear, of concession, or perhaps one still more ignominious, of hope and ambition; and that such a degrading system is a personal outrage upon the pride and delicacy of the present Agents."

"For as much, As though they have in their conduct as individuals, and in their private conduct to answer for their actions before the Courts of the country where they reside, (who proceed according to legal forms and not arbitrary)—it is only to the nation which has delegated them, that they have an account to render, of their official judiciary conduct, and can only resign their mission to the country from which they derive it."

"For all these reasons, I, Consul of the French Republic, at Boston, PROTEST against the act of the Government of the United States, which purports a diffusion of CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE, the Consul, pro tempore, at Boston; and declare, that CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE is wholly deprived of his functions, by being replaced by Mr. Citizen DANNEY, appointed by the Executive Council of the French Republic, to fulfil the duties of the Consulate."

"The Committee of Safety, have discovered a number of tanks in the cellar of the hotel at Vaucluse. They contain 453 units of flour; five ounces of gold, and 4,152 livres in crowns and lost. This property is sent to the national treasury."

"The representatives of the people of Marcellis inform the Convention of the heroism of eight republicans condemned to death by the popular committee of that city. Two of the sufferers displayed remarkable energy and sang froid. They mounted the scaffold, crying out, Long live the Republic, and kissed the national emblem with great veneration."

"The Austrian troops in the environs of Aix-en-Provence are completely disengaged. Sir,

"DUNKIRK is completely besieged; the besiegers are retreating, without knowing where to go: They left behind 20 pieces of cannon, 24 pounds, and left an incredible number of men. The three fortresses made by the garrison have surrendered in a wood, and we hope that no one will escape. The garrison of Gillet made a vigorous sally from Aix, and took 50 wagons loaded with stores."

"For as much, As the force of the powers of foreign Agents is out of the reach of the local Government, and that in regard to this source, it owes the same respect it has a right to claim."

"For as much, As the degrees of rank or extent are nothing to the nature of the confederation due to them, and that the right and force of the nation, as well as the nation itself, is fully represented in all those functions which are exercised in its name."

"For as much, As the character of Foreign Delegates is not, on its part, a formal and necessary contest to their political existence, for they would participate in the right of election, the most sacred of rights, and of higher import to nations, than to individuals."

"For as much, As if the Envoyeur to Consul, is any thing more than a verification of their power, it would be power communicated to them, in which case the Consul would partly exercise the local authority, and would be no longer foreign Agent."

"For as much, As the Consuls having received no power from the local government, can be deprived of none by it. The cancellation, therefore, of an Envoyeur becomes only a nugatory offence."

"For as much, As the functions of French Consul, being nothing else than a French Magistracy established for French Citizens, and operating in no shape upon the Citizens of the United States, the cancelling an Envoyeur can only be understood as a prohibition to all French Citizens to acknowledge the authority of this natural Magistrate; and in this sense this Act of Government has no object, or has a purpose which never can be answered."

"General Belier, in his letter of the 3d of September, announces, that having received intelligence of a body of rebels, to the number of 10,000, who had posted themselves in the wood of the Chateau de Fréjard, he immediately formed the design of attacking them, which he happily effected, having put them to a complete rout, accompanied by an instant slaughter."

"On the 13th of September, a detachment of our army took possession of Parys-Cerd; in this place they found 20 magazines; 4000 muskets; 500 sabres; 150 sheep, and 300 oxen."

"For as much, As a Constitution in all free countries, and even despots, is enslaved ones, having once masked the лица of different functions, it is not permitted to my Government to narrow or enlarge them."

"For as much, As this exemption from control, being not only a security for the public order within, but also of the political tranquillity without, all Foreign Agents have a right to apprehension of those attacks, which an invasion by the local authorities, makes on the Constitution, in the connection which their functions have with that Constitution."

"CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE, who had been appointed to fulfil pro tempore the functions of Consul of the State of Massachusetts, has been dismissed without a previous judgment, by the Chief of the Federal Government, being not only a security for the public order within, but also of the political tranquillity without, all Foreign Agents have a right to apprehension of those attacks, which an invasion by the local authorities, makes on the Constitution, in the connection which their functions have with that Constitution."

"THIS act has been communicated to the Plenipotentiary of the French Republic; and it is by his orders that I am again charged to declare to you, that he does not acknowledge its validity, and that he orders me to solicit again of you the most severe scrutiny of the crime of which CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE is accused, in order that he may be punished by his sovereign, if he be guilty."

"I request then, Sir, very earnestly, in the name of the French Nation, of Justice and of Liberty, that the most formal and solemn Enquiry may be fully made in this State, of the motives of that Danton, and into the legal forms which ought to have preceded it.

"I beg of you, in the mean time, that, in executing my orders, I may deposit in your hands, "my Protest against this impediment of the Executive power of the United States, against the sovereignty of the French Government, tends to introduce into their rule of conduct a principle of fear, of concession, or perhaps one still more ignominious, of hope and ambition; and that such a degrading system is a personal outrage upon the pride and delicacy of the present Agents."

"For as much, As though they have in their conduct as individuals, and in their private conduct to answer for their actions before the Courts of the country where they reside, (who proceed according to legal forms and not arbitrary)—it is only to the nation which has delegated them, that they have an account to render, of their official judiciary conduct, and can only resign their mission to the country from which they derive it."

"A letter from Dunkirk affests, that we have taken 78 pieces of cannon; 1200 barrels of powder; 1900 prisoners, of whom 1300 are English, besides 400 cavalry mounted."

"From the 8th to 9th of September more than 500 bombs and 1000 red hot balls were thrown into Lyons, but without any effect in firing the city, which is constantly watched by 6000 engin men. There is not a doubt entertained of its safety."

"The garrison of Cambrai are reported to have lost 2000 men, 18 pieces of canon and 9 standards in a late sortie; but this account is said to be exaggerated by the aristocrats."

"The Committee of Safety, have discovered a number of tanks in the cellar of the hotel at Vaucluse. They contain 453 units of flour; five ounces of gold, and 4,152 livres in crowns and lost. This property is sent to the national treasury."

"The representatives of the people of Marcellis inform the Convention of the heroism of eight republicans condemned to death by the popular committee of that city. Two of the sufferers displayed remarkable energy and sang froid. They mounted the scaffold, crying out, Long live the Republic, and kissed the national emblem with great veneration."

"The Austrian troops in the environs of Aix-en-Provence are completely disengaged. Sir,

"DUNKIRK is completely besieged; the besiegers are retreating, without knowing where to go: They left behind 20 pieces of cannon, 24 pounds, and left an incredible number of men. The three fortresses made by the garrison have surrendered in a wood, and we hope that no one will escape. The garrison of Gillet made a vigorous sally from Aix, and took 50 wagons loaded with stores."

"For as much, As the force of the powers of foreign Agents is out of the reach of the local Government, and that in regard to this source, it owes the same respect it has a right to claim."

"For as much, As the degrees of rank or extent are nothing to the nature of the confederation due to them, and that the right and force of the nation, as well as the nation itself, is fully represented in all those functions which are exercised in its name."

"For as much, As the character of Foreign Delegates is not, on its part, a formal and necessary contest to their political existence, for they would participate in the right of election, the most sacred of rights, and of higher import to nations, than to individuals."

"For as much, As if the Envoyeur to Consul, is any thing more than a verification of their power, it would be power communicated to them, in which case the Consul would partly exercise the local authority, and would be no longer foreign Agent."

"For as much, As the Consuls having received no power from the local government, can be deprived of none by it. The cancellation, therefore, of an Envoyeur becomes only a nugatory offence."

"For as much, As the functions of French Consul, being nothing else than a French Magistracy established for French Citizens, and operating in no shape upon the Citizens of the United States, the cancelling an Envoyeur can only be understood as a prohibition to all French Citizens to acknowledge the authority of this natural Magistrate; and in this sense this Act of Government has no object, or has a purpose which never can be answered."

"General Belier, in his letter of the 3d of September, announces, that having received intelligence of a body of rebels, to the number of 10,000, who had posted themselves in the wood of the Chateau de Fréjard, he immediately formed the design of attacking them, which he happily effected, having put them to a complete rout, accompanied by an instant slaughter."

"On the 13th of September, a detachment of our army took possession of Parys-Cerd; in this place they found 20 magazines; 4000 muskets; 500 sabres; 150 sheep, and 300 oxen."

"For as much, As a Constitution in all free countries, and even despots, is enslaved ones, having once masked the лица of different functions, it is not permitted to my Government to narrow or enlarge them."

"For as much, As this exemption from control, being not only a security for the public order within, but also of the political tranquillity without, all Foreign Agents have a right to apprehension of those attacks, which an invasion by the local authorities, makes on the Constitution, in the connection which their functions have with that Constitution."

"CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE, who had been appointed to fulfil pro tempore the functions of Consul of the State of Massachusetts, has been dismissed without a previous judgment, by the Chief of the Federal Gov-

"It was complete, and our soldiers have learned by this battle to value their own courage, when set in competition with other soldiers. The English have lost a number of their officers. Two of their generals were buried at Houghton, Prince Adolphus in previously wounded, and general Dalton killed."

"Gen. Brera writes from Mexico, Sept. 13, that new victories were achieved by the troops of the Republic, who have taken Menia, Warwick, and different places of the Lys, which were defended by a body of Dutch troops, well entrenched. General Medeville stormed Werwick. The enemy abandoned 40 pieces of canon, and particularly, particularly, M. Master, M. Clark, and son, M. D'Arce and Pomery and the Editors of the Gazette were led to fly to the extinguishment of the fire kindled of the destruction of their own property—and thereby have become much the greater sufferers in personal property—M. Master left 40 horses, 15 piastras, brandy, molasses and sugar, had destroyed about 600 wt. of tea, together with a considerable quantity of silk, leather, and dry goods—M. Clark and son, a full set of book binding materials—several thousand books and pamphlets, bound in leather—more than one half of their printing types—and nearly every other article belonging to a pretty extensive printing house."

"Mr. John Maley is the principal subscriber in real property."

"ALBANY, November 18, 1793.—WITH the deepest regret we mention, that about half past ten o'clock, last evening, a most tremendous fire broke out in this city, in some houses near the centre of the block formed by the junction of Market and State streets. Many houses and buildings were destroyed, and many persons were injured, among whom are some emigrants; the Misquis de Moro was killed."

"The army of the Moths has driven the Austrians from their posts; and in many instances obliged them to abandon their camps; we have taken 30 pieces of canon. Forty of our cavalry passed the same, and attacked 80 dragons, killed, fired, and brought off six men and six horses."

"A letter from Dunkirk affests, that we have taken 78 pieces of cannon; 1200 barrels of powder; 1900 prisoners, of whom 1300 are English, besides 400 cavalry mounted."

"From the 8th to 9th of September more than 500 bombs and 1000 red hot balls were thrown into Lyons, but without any effect in firing the city, which is constantly watched by 6000 engin men. There is not a doubt entertained of its safety."

"The garrison of Cambrai are reported to have lost 2000 men, 18 pieces of canon and 9 standards in a late sortie; but this account is said to be exaggerated by the aristocrats."

"The Committee of Safety, have discovered a number of tanks in the cellar of the hotel at Vaucluse. They contain 453 units of flour; five ounces of gold, and 4,152 livres in crowns and lost. This property is sent to the national treasury."

"The representatives of the people of Marcellis inform the Convention of the heroism of eight republicans condemned to death by the popular committee of that city. Two of the sufferers displayed remarkable energy and sang froid. They mounted the scaffold, crying out, Long live the Republic, and kissed the national emblem with great veneration."

"The Austrian troops in the environs of Aix-en-Provence are completely disengaged. Sir,

"DUNKIRK is completely besieged; the besiegers are retreating, without knowing where to go: They left behind 20 pieces of cannon, 24 pounds, and left an incredible number of men. The three fortresses made by the garrison have surrendered in a wood, and we hope that no one will escape. The garrison of Gillet made a vigorous sally from Aix, and took 50 wagons loaded with stores."

"For as much, As the force of the powers of foreign Agents is out of the reach of the local Government, and that in regard to this source, it owes the same respect it has a right to claim."

"For as much, As the degrees of rank or extent are nothing to the nature of the confederation due to them, and that the right and force of the nation, as well as the nation itself, is fully represented in all those functions which are exercised in its name."

"For as much, As the character of Foreign Delegates is not, on its part, a formal and necessary contest to their political existence, for they would participate in the right of election, the most sacred of rights, and of higher import to nations, than to individuals."

"For as much, As if the Envoyeur to Consul, is any thing more than a verification of their power, it would be power communicated to them, in which case the Consul would partly exercise the local authority, and would be no longer foreign Agent."

"For as much, As the Consuls having received no power from the local government, can be deprived of none by it. The cancellation, therefore, of an Envoyeur becomes only a nugatory offence."

"For as much, As the functions of French Consul, being nothing else than a French Magistracy established for French Citizens, and operating in no shape upon the Citizens of the United States, the cancelling an Envoyeur can only be understood as a prohibition to all French Citizens to acknowledge the authority of this natural Magistrate; and in this sense this Act of Government has no object, or has a purpose which never can be answered."

"General Belier, in his letter of the 3d of September, announces, that having received intelligence of a body of rebels, to the number of 10,000, who had posted themselves in the wood of the Chateau de Fréjard, he immediately formed the design of attacking them, which he happily effected, having put them to a complete rout, accompanied by an instant slaughter."

"On the 13th of September, a detachment of our army took possession of Parys-Cerd; in this place they found 20 magazines; 4000 muskets; 500 sabres; 150 sheep, and 300 oxen."

"For as much, As a Constitution in all free countries, and even despots, is enslaved ones, having once masked the лица of different functions, it is not permitted to my Government to narrow or enlarge them."

"For as much, As this exemption from control, being not only a security for the public order within, but also of the political tranquillity without, all Foreign Agents have a right to apprehension of those attacks, which an invasion by the local authorities, makes on the Constitution, in the connection which their functions have with that Constitution."

"CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE, who had been appointed to fulfil pro tempore the functions of Consul of the State of Massachusetts, has been dismissed without a previous judgment, by the Chief of the Federal Gov-

"It was complete, and our soldiers have learned by this battle to value their own courage, when set in competition with other soldiers. The English have lost a number of their officers. Two of their generals were buried at Houghton, Prince Adolphus in previously wounded, and general Dalton killed."

"Gen. Brera writes from Mexico, Sept. 13, that new victories were achieved by the troops of the Republic, who have taken Menia, Warwick, and different places of the Lys, which were defended by a body of Dutch troops, well entrenched. General Medeville stormed Werwick. The enemy abandoned 40 pieces of canon, and particularly, particularly, M. Master, M. Clark, and son, M. D'Arce and Pomery and the Editors of the Gazette were led to fly to the extinguishment of the fire kindled of the destruction of their own property—and thereby have become much the greater sufferers in personal property."

"Mr. John Maley is the principal subscriber in real property."

"ALBANY, November 18, 1793.—WITH the deepest regret we mention, that the fire was extinguished but that the fire would soon be under—and by this fatal minute, several houses were destroyed, and several persons were killed."

"The Saturday morning arrived here the ship Canada, or for London, from the Bay of Honduras, burthen 20 tons, deep laden with logwood, a prize to the French Citizen of Bourdeaux, of 36 guns. The first gun, the frigate fired, burst, and the Editor of the Gazette was led to fly to the extinguishment of the fire kindled of the destruction of their own property."

"The army of the Moths has driven the Austrians from their posts; and in many instances obliged them to abandon their camps; we have taken 30 pieces of canon. Forty of our cavalry passed the same, and attacked 80 dragons, killed, fired, and brought off six men and six horses."

"A letter from Dunkirk affests, that we have taken 78 pieces of cannon; 1200 barrels of powder; 1900 prisoners, of whom 1300 are English, besides 400 cavalry mounted."

"From the 8th to 9th of September more than 500 bombs and 1000 red hot balls were thrown into Lyons, but without any effect in firing the city, which is constantly watched by 6000 engin men. There is not a doubt entertained of its safety."

"The garrison of Cambrai are reported to have lost 2000 men, 18 pieces of canon and 9 standards in a late sortie; but this account is said to be exaggerated by the aristocrats."

"The Committee of Safety, have discovered a number of tanks in the cellar of the hotel at Vaucluse. They contain 453 units of flour; five ounces of gold, and 4,152 livres in crowns and lost. This property is sent to the national treasury."

"The representatives of the people of Marcellis inform the Convention of the heroism of eight republicans condemned to death by the popular committee of that city. Two of the sufferers displayed remarkable energy and sang froid. They mounted the scaffold, crying out, Long live the Republic, and kissed the national emblem with great veneration."

"The Austrian troops in the environs of Aix-en-Provence are completely disengaged. Sir,

"DUNKIRK is completely besieged; the besiegers are retreating, without knowing where to go: They left behind 20 pieces of cannon, 24 pounds, and left an incredible number of men. The three fortresses made by the garrison have surrendered in a wood, and we hope that no one will escape. The garrison of Gillet made a vigorous sally from Aix, and took 50 wagons loaded with stores."

"For as much, As the force of the powers of foreign Agents is out of the reach of the local Government, and that in regard to this source, it owes the same respect it has a right to claim."

"For as much, As the degrees of rank or extent are nothing to the nature of the confederation due to them, and that the right and force of the nation, as well as the nation itself, is fully represented in all those functions which are exercised in its name."

"For as much, As the character of Foreign Delegates is not, on its part, a formal and necessary contest to their political existence, for they would participate in the right of election, the most sacred of rights, and of higher import to nations, than to individuals."

"For as much, As if the Envoyeur to Consul, is any thing more than a verification of their power, it would be power communicated to them, in which case the Consul would partly exercise the local authority, and would be no longer foreign Agent."

"For as much, As the Consuls having received no power from the local government, can be deprived of none by it. The cancellation, therefore, of an Envoyeur becomes only a nugatory offence."

"For as much, As the functions of French Consul, being nothing else than a French Magistracy established for French Citizens, and operating in no shape upon the Citizens of the United States, the cancelling an Envoyeur can only be understood as a prohibition to all French Citizens to acknowledge the authority of this natural Magistrate; and in this sense this Act of Government has no object, or has a purpose which never can be answered."

"General Belier, in his letter of the 3d of September, announces, that having received intelligence of a body of rebels, to the number of 10,000, who had posted themselves in the wood of the Chateau de Fréjard, he immediately formed the design of attacking them, which he happily effected, having put them to a complete rout, accompanied by an instant slaughter."

"On the 13th of September, a detachment of our army took possession of Parys-Cerd; in this place they found 20 magazines; 4000 muskets; 500 sabres; 150 sheep, and 300 oxen."

"For as much, As a Constitution in all free countries, and even despots, is enslaved ones, having once masked the лица of different functions, it is not permitted to my Government to narrow or enlarge them."

"For as much, As this exemption from control, being not only a security for the public order within, but also of the political tranquillity without, all Foreign Agents have a right to apprehension of those attacks, which an invasion by the local authorities, makes on the Constitution, in the connection which their functions have with that Constitution."

"CITÉZEN DUPLAISNE, who had been appointed to fulfil pro tempore the functions of Consul of the State of Massachusetts, has been dismissed without a previous judgment, by the Chief of the Federal Gov-

"Ten Dollars Reward! STRAYED of Stolen from the stable of Mr. PHILIPPE CART, near Hockley Falls, on the night of the 4th inst., a black and white Mare, about 4 hands, and half high, natural temper, laid all round—a crack in one of her hoofs, occasioned by being kicked.

"She was taken up paid Mare and Threecroft, and delivered to the subscriber, or for the Mare only, a generous reward, and necessary charges paid."

"ELEAZER CARY, Northampton, November 27, 1793.

A BARGAIN!

For SALE, and sufficient pieces immediately.

A FARM, in Belchertown County, of Hampshire, one mile west of the Meeting House, bounded by the Flume and Saw Mill, Clothier, Pot and Peat-Walk Works—well known by the name of Warren Tavern, on the Flume road from Belchertown to Albany, and occupied as a farm for the Flume road, about 160 acres, a very large Dwelling House, two Barns, one large carriage House, and several other outbuildings.

ALSO.—A Pew, in the Meeting House.

Belchertown, Nov. 6, 1793.

Jonathan Judd, jun.

OBSEVING every one who has any commodities to sell, advertises them in some Newspaper, and those who have debts due to them, call on their debtors in the same way for payment, in conformity to that custom, takes this method to give information, that he has just received an additional supply of GOODS, which, with those he before had on hand, make a good assortment for a country Store; consisting of DRY GOODS, HARDWARE, WEST INDIA GOODS, GROCERIES, CROCKERY, GLASS, STONES and EARTHEN WARE.

ALSO; White Lead, Spanish White, White Oil, Malaga Wine, Allan, Cognac, Logwood.

He receives in payment Pork, Beef, Lamb, Tallow, Bees-Wax, Butter, Cheese, White Pine Shingles, Barrell Saves and Heating Flax, White Beans, Wheat, Rice, Indian Corn, Buckwheat and Oats, or Co/8 if desired, and will credit those who desire it, when there is a probability of payment.

Those indebted whose time of payment has expired, are requested to settle their account immediately, and Payment made while it can be done without distressing themselves and families.

Said Judd, has a dwelling House and Garden upon lot, which may be entered upon immediately—it is a suitable habitation for a Mechanic, many of which are wanted in the town, a Sudler in particular.—Ho wants to purchase four young Cattle.

NEWHAMS, Jonathan, Nov. 25,