And supposing, secondly—that the perchases of warlike stores and provisions are nd repointing, recommy man are partially and provisions are specified, and ought to be made and dired to France with celerity, the Minexpedited to France with celerity, the Min-first Gener defires to know how the mo-ney can be replaced, in case the American government thould refuse to anticipate the

The method in the second place, should be the fame, because the Minister General will not accept state seem rices of the American government, unless he can make use of them as ready money, of which he is to affore himself before the conclusion of any transactions on either fide.

to France.

There are but two methods to provide for this improbable contingency—if we can impose that the United States have any interests in acknowledging the French Republic, and living on friendly term with here.

Even admitting that we could not reckon on the good will of the United States, the dearness or the merals, in comparison to notes, not permitting us to export a large fum of dollars to America, we should be obliged to make use of drafts on Europe .
They must be either on London or Auster dam, by the help of a credit to be obwe must give information in America, or pon the national treasury of France it

The English government having deter mined to make war on us, the first method cannot and ought not to be made use of. It would be not only impossible to obtain a redit to the end of our operations, but i would be attended with great expense from the low flate of exchange occasiones by the wir. The only refource then re-maining, rould be to furnith orders on the national readory: But if these should re-joy the credit which they ment, there is reason to believe, that the American would all lapter them for assuments of the debt. of the United States. So that it is very probable, that this means of managing the matter in America, the best the Republic is at prefent capable of devising, is that of which the executive council may with the greatest fafety irly, unless the United States would with to reader themfelres hostile to-wards the Republic, which from every ap-pearance is unlikely to be the case.
