The very forbearance to prefs profecutions, was mifuterpreted into a fear of origing the execution of the laws; and af-one of condemnation. Hence, while the greater part of Pennsylvania itself were conforming themselves to the after excise. greater part of Pennfylrania infell were continuing themselves to the afthor exuse, a few counties were refolved to fruftrant them. It was now perceived, that every expectation from the tenderacts which had hitherto been purfied, was narvailing, and that further delay could not creare as o-plation of imporency, or sirrefolation in the government. Legal pracels was, the va-fore, delivered to the marfial, againft the rioters and delinquent diffillers. No fooner was he underflood to be en-greed in this duty, thus the venerance of gaged in this duty, than the vengeance armed men was simed at his perfon, a armed men was simed at his person, and the personal property of the inspector of the revenue. They fired upon the marshal. the restone. They fined upon the mathal, artefled bips, and distanced him, for foundation, at a primer, we will be supposed by the primer of the price of other process, on the well file of the Alleghary mountain; and a deputation was afterwards fout to him to demand a forreader of that which he bad ferved. A numerous bady repeatedly attacked the hoofe of the infpector, frized his papers of office, and faulty defined by the process of the office, and finally defroyed, by fire, his buildings, and whatforver they contained. Both of these officers, from a just regard Both of their others, from a just regard to their fatter, fled to the fast of government; it being rowed, that the motives of fact outrages were, to compel the relignation of the inflection; in withstand, by force of arms, the authority of the United States, and thereby to extort a repeal of the laws of excile, and an alteration in the canded of conversion.

the laws of excile, and an alteration in the conduct of government.

Upon the tellimony of thefe facts, an allocate jailine of the laptenic control of the United States notified to me, that "in the counties of Walhington and Allegbarry, in Pendrylvania; laws of the United States were opposed, and the execution thereof obtracked, by combinations, too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary counts of individual process. powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary re-counts of judicial proceedings, or by the powers wested in the marshal of that district. On this call, momentums in dis-trict. On this call, momentum in the extreme, I supply and weighed what might best fudded the criss. On the one had, the judiciary was pronounced to be fitting of its expectly to enforce the law: Crimes, which reached the very existence of social order, were temperated without. order, were perpetrated without controll the friends of government were infulied, aboved, and overzwed into filener, or an apparent aequieferore; and to yield to the treafousble fury of fo fmall a portion of the United States, would be to violate the fundamental principle of our confine-tion, which enjoins, that the will of the majority thall prevail. On the other. ter the expence, and other ambarraliments have been found capable of an inforrect tion. It is doe, however, to the charafter delicate—too closely intersogna with many often government, and to its stability, many affecting considerations, to be lightly which cannot be shaken by the ensemies of order, freshy to useful the course of this creat.

During the fission of the year 1700, it was expedient to exercise the legislative receives the power granted by the constitution of the United States, "to lay and collect excises." In a majority of the states, scarce ly an objection was heard to this mode of taxation. In some, indeed, alarms were stiff concreved, notil they were banking the states. The same transfer concreved, not they were banking to the same transfer concreved, not they were banking to the same transfer concreved, not they were banking to the same transfer concreved in the same transfer control to the of fo diffant an expedition, were flens ton
