Although the report of the Commiffion. ers marks their framels and abilities, and must noite all virmons men, by shewing that the means of conciliation have been exhaufted; all of those who had committed, or abested the tumults, did not fulferibe the mild form, which was proposed as the atonement ; and the indications of peareable temper were neither fofficien ly general, nor conclusive to recommend or warrant a further inspension of the march of the Militia,

Thus, the painful alternative could not be difearded. I ordered the Militia to march, after once more admonifhing the in-furgents, in my preclamation of 25th of September 148.

It was a talk, too difficult to afcertain with precision, the lowest degree of force competent to the quelling of the infurrec-tion. From a respect, indeed to the coconomy and the eafe of my fellow citi-zens, belonging to the militia, it would have gratified me to accomplish such an estimate. My very great reluctance to al cribe too much importance to the opposi-tion, had its extent been accurately feen. uldhave been a decided indocement to would have been a decided indocement to the finallest efficient numbers. In this nu-certainty, therefore, I put into motion fif-tren thousand men, as being an army, teen thousand men, as being an are which, according to all human calculations which, according to all human calculations. would be prompt, and adequate in every view, and might perhaps, by rendering tetiflance desperate, prevent the effoliat States of New-Jerley, Panofylvania, Ma-ryland, and Virginia; the Governor of Pennfylvania having declared on this occa-fion an opinion which juffified a requifition to the other flates.

As Commander in Chief of the Milities when called into the affinal fervice of the United States, I have vifited the places of general rendezvous, to obtain more exact information, and to direct a plan for ultefor movements. Had there been room for a perfusion that the laws were fecure from obfluction—that the civil magistrate was able to bring to judice such of the most culpable as have not embraced the proffered terms of amnesty, and may be deemed fit objects of example ; that the friends of prace and good government were not in need of that aid and countenance which they ought always to receive, and I truff ever will receive, against the vicious and turbulent. I mould have caught with a vidity the opportunity of reflering the mi-litis to their families and home. But fue cording intelligence has rended to manifelt the necrifity of what has been done; it heing now confedied, by those who were not in-lined to exaggrate the ill-conduct of the intergence, that their materials are not pointed merely to a particular Jaw; but that a spirit intimical to all order has affected merely to a particular Jaw; affinated many of the offenders. If the continuance of my prefence with the army, it would not have been withholden; but every appearance effering fuch an iffine as will reduced to the reporation and firength of the United States, I have judged it most proper to refume my duties at the feat of government, leaving the chief command with the Governor of Virginia, Still, however, as it is probable, that in a commotion like the prefent, whatforver may be the pretence, the purposes of mis-chief and revenge may not be laid aside: the flationing of a small force for a certain period in the four western counter of Pennsylvania, will be indispensible, whether we contemplate the fituation of those who are connected with the execution of the laws, or of others, who may have exposed themselves by an honorable attachment to
