

ON MARRIAGE.

HAIL, wedlock hail! no violie,
H Perpetual fountain of domestic joy;
Love, friendship, honor, truth and pure delight,

Harmoious singe in the nuptial rite,
In Eden first the holy tree began.
When perfect, how sweet delight it did man;
The human pair'th Almighty Pontificated,
Gay as the morning to the bridal bed.

A dread solemnity th' espousals gred,
Angels the witors, and God the Priest;
All earth exulted on the nuptial hour,
And voluntary robes deck'd the bower.
The joyous birds on ev'ry blossom'd spray,
Sang Hymenes to th' important day;

While Phœnix swell'd the spoutful song,
And Parrot with gratulations rang.

KNOXVILLE, November 29.—
We feel ourselves compelled, notwithstanding the pleasing prospect of peace, held forth in our last, to state the following account of murders, &c., by Indians; but would willingly hope they were not committed by Cherokees:

On the 24th of October last, a party of Indians fired upon John Loper and another man, near the house of the former, on the east fork of Red river, Tennessee county. On the same day another party of Indians killed and scalped Evan Jenkins, within one hundred yards of Col. Winchester's mill, in Sumner county. These two places are twenty miles from each other. On the 25th of the same month, a party of twelve fellows were discovered crossing the road between Bledd's Lick and Chaver's Cabins. On the following day Conner Evans was fired upon between Bledd's Lick and Col. Winchester by four fellows; and on the 29th the spires discovered a party of thirteen Indians crossing Cumberland river, towards the settlements, within five miles of Col. Winchester's. These several parties appearing in and about the settlements, nearly at the same time, spreading an unusual degree of alarm among the inhabitants. Families in general throughout the neighbourhood, shut themselves up in their stations, and all intercourse ceased for several days, except by patrolling parties. The people exclaimed, Congress could not know their sufferings, and have the feelings of men, or they would take measures to give them effectual protection.

On the fifth inst., a party of fifty Indians, on the waters of Red river, Tennessee county, fell upon the families of Col. Isaac Tisworth, and his brother, John Tisworth, and killed and scalped seven white persons, wounded a negro wench and took a white man, three children, and a negro fellow prisoner. This was given by the neighbouring militia, and the Indians discovered their approach, took away three children and scalped them, taking off the whole skin of their heads. The white man and negro fellow were either killed, or carried off. An informant from Merri distrit, supposes these murders to have been committed by Creekas.

On the ninth inst., the Indians killed John Covington, on his way from Red Bank, on the Ohio to Muddy River, Kentucky.

LIFE OF BARON STEUBEN.

This excellent man, whose name will be ever dear to the citizens of the United States, as long as virtue and patriotism shall be respected, was a native of Germany, where his merit had raised him to places of the highest trust and distinction. He was ad-dé-camp to the late king of Prussia, and lieutenant-governor of one of the circles of the German empire. These posts, and others he left to embark with us in the cause of freedom. In 1777, he arrived in America, and immediately joined our army, as a volunteer. In 1778, congress gave him the rank of major general to the army of the United States. Under the disadvantage of being a total stranger to our customs and language, of encountering the prejudices which existed against foreigners; of reducing an army, scarcely then formed, and continually changing, whose habit in civil life had not been those of subordination, and who, at that moment, were combating that they might be free; to reduce such an army to the strict rules of discipline, was a task which none but a brave and virtuous man would have undertaken; to bring this army to a point of knowledge, exactitude, and order, which infinitely exceeded that of their veteran enemy; and, at the same time to acquire the love and veneration of the officers and soldiers, could have been effected by no other than Baron Steuben; and no other heart than his could have repaid so fully the reward, which heaven gave to the virtuous exertions of our army—the independence of their country.

The baron was a volunteer in the militia of Monmouth; commanded in Virginia with a handful of Militia against Arnold and Phillips; and commanded in the teaches at York town, on the day, which concluded the struggles of America, on the day when Lord Cornwallis surrendered the last hope of the king of Great Britain. To his military character, the baron added all the virtues of the citizen, and the accomplishments of the gentleman. His knowledge was extensive, his understanding clear, and his judgment sound. His heart was formed by nature to be open to all his children, and he never closed it.

This is a short, a faint sketch of the character of the excellent Baron Steuben, given by a man, who had the honor to be intimately acquainted with him fifteen years, and who never knew him guilty of an unworthy action—who never knew him omit a good one.

ON NEWSPAPERS.

"MUCH has been said and written on the utility of newspapers—but one principle advantage which might be derived from these publications has been neglected; we mean that of reading them to school, and by the children in families—Tidy for one season—Do you wish your child to improve in reading facility, give him a newspaper—it furnishes a variety, some part of which must infallibly touch his fancy. Do you wish to instruct him in geography—nothing will so indispensably fix the relative situation of different places as the stories and events published in the paper." In fine—do you wish to have him acquainted with the manners of the country or city—the mode of doing business, public and private—or do you wish to have a smattering of every kind of science useful and amusing, give him a newspaper—Newspapers are plenty and cheap, the cheapest book that can be bought, and the more you buy the better for your children, because every part furnishes some new and valuable information. Instead of being a luxury, it is a master of economy, and the poor-folk family that exists, may and ought to be furnished with at least one paper per week. Encourage newspapers, and you encourage learning; and you secure the liberties of posterity.

Learning in the hands of a few, effects little, but generally diffused is an effective barrier against every invasion of the Right of Man.—Newspapers supply the want of schools, the want of company, and the want of preaching. They have the power to mitigate the pains of the afflicted, alleviate the distresses of the sorrowful, check the wild extravagance of the licentious, bring home the prodigal, and in fine, to do good to all ranks, denominations, characters and situations in life."
