He declared that air was also periforment. priforment. He declered that air was abfoliusly necessary, and proposed that LayFayette should be allowed to go in a carriage, accompanied by his friend La Tour Maubourg, onder the guard of an officer.
This was granted. At the hour suppointed, Ballman went on horseback to the gate of the caller; La Fayette and La Tour Maubourg, with an efficer of the guard, went with Bollman into the carriage, took an artion and returned: Bollman mountan arring and returned; Bollman mount-ed his horfe at the gate of the caffle and went away. Thefe sirings were feveral since consisted, until the prifouer and the physician has gained the eatire confidence of the officer, who confented, one fine afor the uniters, was contented, one has at-tember, to take an arring on foot. Boll-man feat away the carriage, and ordered his fervant to follow him with two faddle borfes. Having got to a little diffuse, he and his fervant feigred and bound the officer. La Fayette, and La Tour Ma-bourte mounted the two hofes and incliometr. La Payere, and La add the hourg mounted the two horfes, and received a purfe of money, with which Bollman was provided. He told them of a place where they would find a post chaife. He and his fervant took another road, where
