

THE OLD BACHELOR.

I'm weary of a single life, I really wish I had a wife;
My years consume in care and pain,
And nature proves I've liv'd in vain.
I've said so long that doubt and fear,
The girls now fly me like a deer;
And when I see a pretty maid, If she is not wedlock is afraid, Or BETSY will you be my bride?
She laughs as if she's split her side.
Good Lord must I endure such scorn!
I with it never had been born!
Or had I shun'd this deadly woe, By wedlock forty years ago.
But well they may revile at me, I'm not the same I used to be.
My beard is long, my head is grey, My eyes are fat—my teeth decay;
My skirt is dirty, and much worn, My coat is old my small cloths torn;
My shoes, alas! they have no soles, My stockings have five hundred holes;
And all these woes, and ill's of life;
Are nothing but the want of wife; Please God I live, and tarry here, I'll have a wife before a year.
But should I unfeeling prove,
In all the fond intrigues of love; Should all despise me and my self;
I'll go, BE GONE and hang myself.

TIM CAUSTY.

PENNSYLVANIA.

BY THOMAS MIFFLIN, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS it has been represented to me, upon oath, that certain ill-disposed persons have, without due authority, unlawfully intruded upon and assaulted, and are attempting to seize and seize, certain lands situated within the County of Luzerne, in violation of the rights and the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania, as settled and declared by the decree of the Committee, or judges, of the United States, at Trenton, on the girding day of Dec.
1, 1782; and also in contempt of the laws and judicial proceedings of this Commonwealth: And whereas it appears to me expedient, as well for preserving the public peace, as for affording just protection to the property of the real owners of the said lands, that the said ill-disposed persons, their agents and abettors, should be warned of the danger to which they inexplicably expose themselves, and the tranquility of the state, by persevering in such unlawful conduct; and that, collectively and separately, they should be enjoined forthwith to desist therefrom: Therefore I have issued this Proclamation, hereby enjoining all persons whomsoever, as far as they regard their own safety, and the public welfare, to forbear from intruding upon, surveying, occupying, and settling any of the lands in the county of Luzerne aforesaid, or any other lands within this Commonwealth, unless the same be done peaceably, and in a due course of law; And all Judges, Justices, Sheriffs, and other public officers, according to the duties of their respective functions, are hereby directed vigilantly to enquire after, and by all lawful means to prevent, any proceedings of the illegal nature and dangerous tendency herein before set forth.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, at Philadelphia, the twenty-sixth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five, and of the Commonwealth the nineteenth.

THOMAS MIFFLIN.

By the Governor:
A. J. Dallas
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

P. A. R. I. S., December 6.

The crimes of which the members of the revolutionary Committee of Safety have been guilty, have depopulated a considerable part of the French territory; they have caused to perish in the midst of torment, patriotic citizens and virtuous men; the desolated Banks of the Lure, witness against them, and history will transmit their names with horror to posterity. If their execrable crimes remain unpunished, we have only to draw a funeral veil over the altar of justice, and in mournful silence, wait the dissolution of the Republic, and the return of servitude.

One charge against the old committee of Public Safety is, that during the forty days that Robespierre absented himself from the Committee immediately preceding his fall, there were guillotined in Paris, four hundred and MORE persons, than had ever been guillotined before in the same space of time.

... All is tranquil in this city; we continue to progresse with confidence under the standard of the Convention, since it is no longer governed by the factions, and to parties with ardent tho' Villains who have covered France with misery and cruelty, and who yet pretend to excuse their crimes, by saying, they acted under an authority, which it is known any power in the world which had the right to permit those afflictions, plan-nings and robberies of every kind, of which our country was the theatre; as if there could exist any authority on earth, which had the right, to sacrifice a whole people into a bath of blood, (Bain de-Sang) to overturn the holiest laws of nature, and to replace it, as far as they might in despair, by guilty of something. They were all sheltered in the prison, a secretary read over the sentence to them, and they were immediately conducted to the guillotine!

REVOLUTIONARY TRIBUNAL,
Sitting of the 5th Dec.
Antoine Quentin Fauquier Talleyrand, aged 47 years, born at Herouet, district of St.
Quentin, Ex-Precurer at the Chatelet, Ex-public Accuser at the Revolutionary Tribunal in Paris, has appeared before his judges.

He is accused of having wickedly, and with criminal design, strangely, and in every manner prevaricated in the fundings of his office, of having seconded and favoured the bickering and counter-revolutionary plots and plots of the enemies of the people and the republic, and of having, himself, conspired, as author or accomplice, against the interior safety of the state, and the French people—of having, consequently aimed at the disaffection of the National Representation, the destruction of the Republican government, and the re-establishment of royalty—of having sought, by murder and terror, to produce an armament of the citizens, moved by his terrible hands, had been, in effect, the firebrand of fury, and the facilitator of cruelty.

He was invested, during eighteen months, with the painful obligation of pursuing and punishing crimes; but honored at the same time by the holy and consolatory power of raising his voice in favor of innocence, of defending it and of protecting it. He was, however, capable of the cruel pleasures of confounding these two duties, and taking them in an inverse sense.

He is accused of having caused to be condemned and executed many persons, without presenting an act of accusation against them, or obstructing in their favor any formalities, ordered by the law.

In many cases he substituted one person for another, so that persons who were never tried or condemned, were yet put to death, and many who were condemned, were not even there.

On many articles of the accusation mentioned a citizen, whom he condemned and executed for writing to him to demand his liberty. It appeared to Fauquier, that the petitioner was in hafte, and that he ought to be satisfied. Thus he amused himself with misery, and by a refinement of cruelty, sent this victim to the scaffold, with a cart full of affliction, and halited like them in a red shirt, though he had never been charged with such crime.

Having several times ordered one of the sergeants of the law to take out of prison for trial, a man whom he named, and being told by the sergeant, that there were several of the same name, in the same prison, he answered, "then bring them all."

They were accordingly all brought out, condemned and executed, without any accusing against either of them.

As a result of the tribune declared, that one day, saw Fauquier Talleyrand, in the lobby with the jurors. They were pallid on the galleries and the galleries.

Fauquier said, to many a day, that will give us four to five hundred each decade, and the jurors applauded.

After the affair of Dantzig, Camille des Meurons, and the rest, began the custom of arraiging fifty prisoners at once, but it was not fully adopted, until Robespierre, and his partisans thought proper no longer to disguise their horrid intentions.

At that epoch Fauquier caused to be constituted all round the hall a number of benches, rising one above the other, like the galleries of a theatre, up to the corrice of the ceiling, so as to receive a greater number of victims at a time.

conspiracy." They all answered "no." If any of them attempted to make an observation, "you have no longer the right of speaking," replied Danton. If they insisted, they were condemned immediately.
This operation began at 10 o'clock in the morning, and was finished at 11 or 12.

The jurors then retired into their chamber, and in a quarter of an hour returned, and made their declaration, "to their souls, and testimony, that all the accused were guilty of the attempt to assassinate, plot, and murder, and robbery of every kind, which our country was the theatre; as if there could exist any authority on

thing." They were all sentenced in the
to them, and they were immediately conducted to the guillotine!
