Dominic did fo much by his cares and continued perfecutions, that he finally established it at Toplouse. It was a late as the year 1484, that it became known in Spain. It was also to a Dominican, John de Torquemada, that the court of Rome owed this obligation. As he was confesior to Queen Habella, he had extorted from her, a promise, that, it ever the afcended the throng, the would up every means to extirpate Herefy and Hercries. Ferdenand had conquered Grenada, and had chased from the Spanish realms, multitudes of unfortunate Moors.
