The lonesome day! the melanchuly night!

The frequent figh! too foliary tear!

Dull repetition! care succeeding care!

Gloom waps the foul, no gleams of joy are feen.

No pleating dalliance, to remove the fpleen No grateful intercourse, to raile the smile eye meets eye, our forrows to beguile No tender looks when we with home may part,

No sapture on retutning meets the heart; No partner in difficels to fympathize, No friend in difficulty to advice. To chafe our doubts, our zeal reanimate. And help to fit or for a forure flate. Then hear the voice of truth-comme

The writer of these most supposited, will so manage their practice, that the whole of that bosiners will be capitally desirable that they all stills from a friendly structure, the whole of the tobic most its those amisting gestlemen, who now are appointed, will so manage their practice, that the whole of the tobic most its before a lawyer, and being a person of the most indicated previous to the coming in of the jury; and there will not be more title lary; she there will not be more title lary; and their a greatly the temper and disposition, would do honour to the benefic any Ciriy boliocii, recept what is done on West pediary morning before ten o'clock, is malafied after the Jury arrive in Court. But the Circuit Court, if proper men are appointed, will fo mange their practice, that the whole of that boliucis will be fettled previous to the coming in of the Jury; and there will not be more idle time for the Jury in the Circuit Courts than to the Supreme Judicial Court.

We often amofe ourfelves by relating the Bories of ancient these; and ancedotes respectively mornishments under the blue leave.

make the, fame feledion, and the confe-quence will be the fame.

I agree that this act, as it provides Ja-ton for the Supreme judicial Court, is ex-cellent; but its confequences to the leffer courts are, peroleious in the extreme. I much doubt whether; a fingle Petit Jury in any Court of Common Pleas face 1784, his been collected, to any three of whom, are parties litigating, would have been willing to refer a range of five pounds value. Should the Circuit System take thet, it will become indiffernibly nevel fary to alter the prefent law respecting the appointment of Jurous, and break down the odious diffinction of two Jury-boxes; the felection for which favours too much of best and worst, highest and lowest, of Those from Maine only making £ 256 13 4 of the from—and those from Berkihare £ 96 13 4. Who are the men from whom those sees are squeezed, from and by the those of the from the sees are squeezed, men from whom these tees are squeezed, frequently by the sale of their papperty at owner, for the first value? I suffer, the MILISTANDER, MAIL AND LANGE TO BE SOURCED TO the Supreme Judicial Court, amount to fun. Frequently causes are continued round a whole year, to the delay of justice and the great injury of the foirors. If the revising Committee of 1788 were of opin-ion (and they were belt able to determine it, being a majority of them Judges of the Supreme Judicial Court,) that fuch an arrangement would be " for the eafe of the people," why in the name of canding is an attempt to leffen the miferies of the diffiteff ed, branded with the odious, infamous ap pellation of Shayfifm?

A bill paffed the Houle of Represent tives the last winter for this purpose. What were the objections then held out by the opposers of the Bill? It was faid that it would be impolitick to make lo material an alteration in the Supreme Judicial Court, without confuling the Judges of that Court. A motion was made to refer the bill to their confideration. This was the on the members voting for it. It was then faid that fome of the prefeat Clerks of the Courts of Common Pleas were incompetent to the discharge of the daties of Clerks of the Supreme Judicial Court. To this it was faid in aufwer, that, if fo, they were unfi: to be Clerks, in the Cours of Common Pleas; and the community would be gainers in a double re-fped, by paffing the bill; that the duty was technically the fame in each office; and that it was of regual importance that the records of each Court should be kept by proper persons, an immense property by proper persons, an immense property depending on the records of the Common Pleas as well as those of the other Court. It was then faid that Mr. Coffing and Mr.

Tracker were men of amiable characters, and had faithfully ferved the public—that and had families to support they had calculated on those offices as a support for life, and that they might for ereas for the, and that they might the change. The this it was answered, that every body would allow that every thing which had been faid in favour of the private as well as publick charafter of the gentlemen who held that cffice, was true; yet ours was a govern-ment of laws and not of men; that the we see and worth, anglest and rewest or ment of laws and not on their characteristics good, or and lower grades, and has often times to office, was created for the public good, breas fource of all blood and irreconcils. I and not for the convenience of any manand not for the convenience of any man-valuable with that which he now holds. The upposite of the bill then proposed to fave half the lost, to retain the circuit Clerk to go with the Judges, and have the records kep to each county; this however had no effect, and the bill paffed the Hande by a very great majority: Some supposed feren eighths of the House voted for it, though no return was taken. It was late to the Seffinn, and was referred in the Senate. However, many have thought that from the unmber of that body, who were judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, it was there deemed beff to make no invoad on a "the action of the body, who were thought of the procedure," self it thould "be recorded for a precedent," and the Courts." the Cours of Common Pleas might be next attacked.
