His fifter and brether;
"O yes," replied More, "that is Wright."

OF ENGLAND.

If England is not at the eve of acrifis, appearances are very deceiful. The public mind in that country has been of late enlightened by the boldness of publications which would not have been tole-rated a few years back, and the very means used to repress the growing thirst for information, and the manly spirit of investigation, have produced a contrary -Those persecutions instituted by government against popular writers and publishers, have been the means of increasing their reputation, and confequently extending their influence .-Thelwall may be mentioned as an inflance of this kind. He was profecuted as a reformer; he, with others, was acquitted, and now on the reputation built on that unfuccelsful perfecution, he gives to crouded audiances lectures on politics, which are then collected in a periodical publication, which featters far and wide the feeds of those doctrines, which gotempted at first to suppress.

England appears tipe for a revolution; they have within them the materials of which revolutions are formed, and want but the fpring that shall give them motion. A moving principle must be found operating universally among the mass of people. In a country where that mass may be faid literally to live from hand to mouth, hunger will prove the most power-ful, and this principle is on the eve of operating with full force.

vernment for its felf-prefervation, at

Among the many evidences of ex-treme fearcity to be found in the last ac-counts from that country, 'the observations which dropt in the Houfe of Lords from the Marquis of Landidowne, on the fubject of the King's freech, are perhaps the most shiking, the following is an ex tract from them.

"I have made it my bufiness to en quise into an actual fituation of the poor in my neighbourhood, and carefully a voided mixing politics with my inquir ies, either directly or indirectly. Their firuation was fuch, as produced no comfortable fensations—they were a fluidly flavoring. In January last, I held in my hand a paper relative to this subject, but no

Mr. Tazawell offered the following refolutions to the Senate after a few preliminary remarked. Refolved by the Senate of the United States in Congress affershed. That the Prefedent be informed, the Senate have received with the purell pleafore, the evidence of the contineed friending of the French Republic which accompanied his matting of yedgeday.

That he acqualted to alliare that magoanimous aution through the proper organ, that the Santan unite with him in all the feeling experified to the missiler of France, on the preferencing of the Colourafo his nation, and the ir flould were this fymbol of the triumphs and infranchifement of that great prople, given as piedge of rainfol friending, and place it among the crideness and memoratic of the freedom—and—independence of the United States, that it may contribute to the thin and perpetute the finence a fifetion by which commonicated his anderr to the Senatz there was it proper he steed, that the Executive thread he regarded to make a fround andwar and margin the face words. The Fredentia his andwar expressly flye, that he fracks not only his non-fractioners, but those of the citizens at large, fredening, no doubt, the Senate. In this fluction of the read-cition outlook as he proper to be done by the Senate but to express their opinion of the propristy of his andwar, and this would be accomplished by adopting the foldenace of the reflection after fliring out the would proposed. There could be, he concluded by otherwing, no difference of feeling in the Senate on the occasion. The only difference was in the mode of expressing it and be included. In this cases were not senate.

In fifty was intended, but the ideas or implied in profides of a witness were as legal refinancy; in remained with the jury to draw interesces.
