A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

A MONG real neighbours and trimed this is to see empty complication. The with is the proceeding of the seed of the seed left that, which is killed by crimical indulged cir.

When people with one another a happy new year, they generally mean a year free from two bies a year of health, end and profective. Their ingredients of happined depends chiefly on the will of Previdence. And thefe withen, when finence, only be candidered in prayers to heave the will of Previdence. And thefe withen, when finence, with a happy new year. But an occurad praipring in a practition good, it behors every me for to regulate his publication, appliers, and candide as to feeture the tranquility of his mined, and the appliand of his conference.

Including the profession of the mined of the conference with tranquility of his mined, and the appliand of his conference.

In all exigencies, and adverticies a friend man, has, in all exigencies, and advertices a friend man comference on high. But, in order to this inward peace, and his foperior fapport, there will be and try, parity, and artialecth. No life is not pleaf ing to God that is not sprillable to men, and per fettire of four statum. If we are given the status of the profession of the prediction of the profession of the ing to God that is not perfitable to men, and per feetire of our auturn. If we are fineers, where we wish others a tappy new year, we test infiguited to contribute to their bappinets; and, therefore, to be balgadi, on all proper occasions, and exemplany in all the borial virtues; and, in the say, to be higher of their poy. The indulgence of easy, recept, ill will, or fordid felikhosis, in incondition with heavily willing them a happy new year; and, indeed, it rendetaes smarighbourty and university.

" I will pay you in a few days."

FF we rank the troubles which we eve ry day experience, among the evils to which we are inevitably doomed in our prefent flate of imperfection; I elieve that on examination of our condust we thould find, that prograftination was as great an evil as any which ariles from our imperfection. The indiferent man proceedinates many things, and he who proceaftingtes many things, is certainly indifferent. But this is too obvious to need repeating: Example, fays my uncle Charley, is better than precept. Mr. Siekly, when he employs people to work for him, tells them he will pay them in a few days. When he trades at the merchants's ftore, tho' the merchant keep no book, and trufts no person; or when he is at any other expense whatever, it is just the same. He was once called the flower of the family ;-as he wore his hair club'd, ear-locks crap'd, nankeen veft in the winter, holland thirt ruffled with the ame, a dirty cravat or handanno, old hoots well blacken'd, and flip'd down in imitation of bootees :--this drefs, togethcountenance, but rather large lips, you may readyly apprehend conflicture a gentleman. Handy thing is wanting to give you an idea of him, it is his principles.
