

A DIEU, a heart-felt warm adieu,
Ye breath of my life—
The spirit of my brightest joy—
Companions of my fond repose—
I'm to a foreign land my bane,
Perfusing fortune's liply baw,
With aching heart and knifell eye,
Till my soul still, when far awa.

But have I met your foial bands,
To spread a cheerful felicitie night?
Oft honored with supreme command,
Perfiding from the glow of light,
Which none but Craftsmen ever saw;
Strong mem'ry in my heart shall write,
Thus happy scenes when far awa.

My freedom, harmony and love,
Cemented you in the grand design;
Breathe the consciousness above,
The glorious architected divine;

First you met me on the meeting line,
Still guided by the plummets law;
Fall under bright completely fine,
Shall be my prayer when far awa.

And you farewell while merit claims,
Till the high bell hale to wear;

My Heaven blest your noble name,
To MASONRY and Scotia dear,

A full requit permit me then;

When yearts you're destined awe;

Our round look it with a tear,

To him, the friend that's far awa.

And you kind hearted Sisters say,
I beg farewell to all your charms;

For yearts of venerationing thee,
With yearts of my heart did wear,

Alas! the frosty winter's night,

No more winter while breaths we drew,

Till Sisters, Brothers, all gone,

In that Grand Lodge that's far awa.
