

It has been impossible to get you an article of the kind which the African Army of the Rhine had to the army of Italy arrived, which joined to the numerous recruits, and to a considerable number of battalions dispatched from the interior of Germany, resorting to the aid of the Africans was the general opinion that the Africans would soon be in Milan.

The 15th, at three in the morning, the division of General Maffei was attacked by a very numerous force of the French, who were supported by the 15th half brigade of light infantry, entered the city in a large body of the enemy, who surrounded it on all sides. The Gen. of brigade, Refia, was wounded. With a part of this division surrounded General Coloux at Salo, another part passed General Coloux's French troops which I had before mentioned belonging to the 25th regiment of Chaffaux, two generals, and several figures of officers who were left behind.

The division of Gen. Soret was then detached to cover Brescia, and was then defeated by the French in a difficult position, and was then completely annihilated. It was necessary to adopt an extensive plan. The enemy, in defeating the Tyrol, by Brescia and the Alps, was in the center of the Republic, and was in a position to face the two divisions of the enemy, it was able to engage each of them separately, and by my position, I found my place between them. I was therefore obliged to force them to separate, and I defended the Brescia, take them from thence and return to the Tyrol in order to re-engage them. THE ADVANCE GUARD OF GENERAL GARRICA
The advance guard of General Garrica having the smallest division to march, were first before the enemy. It was composed by a battalion and five companies of the enemy, who made a feat of falling back at the approach of our troops, and followed them party to center. Then their Cavalry advanced from several fronts and surrounded the French, who had advanced with some 200 men. The action began and was very terrible. On another quarter, General Klein at the head of fifty Dragoon also entered the City in the hope of security as few French troops before him, but he was killed and his men were scattered. On the 23rd the enemy's infantry superior in number. At last after an hour's obstinate combat French valour triumphed, and the enemy fled.

Brno, chief of division, in the 2d. Regiment of Dragoon, fell into the power of the enemy. The two squadrons that he commanded, like him, gave proofs of the greatest courage. We have found in Brno from 15 to 18000 quintals of grain and a considerable quantity of arms. The French Republic five millions of Dollars. It is said that an army of 30,000 men; it will equip a squadron, which in concert with the 2d. Regiment of Dragoon, will be sent to the aid of the French Republic. THE FRENCH, THE JOINT VICTORY.
The French, the joint victory, will long have to thank themselves for the assistance of a patriotic and valiant people. They write from Nice, that the festivity of the French was celebrated in the night, and their bodies were illuminated by the light of the sun.
