ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE (describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within community)

This block is two stories in height with slate hipped roof and pedimented dormer. The symmetrical six-bay facade has a central double entrance with two-story porch. Rusticated stone is used for the quoins and continuous belt courses connecting the sills and lintels of the first and second floor windows.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE (explain the role owners played in local or state history and how the building relates to the development of the community)

This four tenement block was built around the turn-of-the-century on a short street off of Prospect St. just north of Round Hill. Daniel Lynch, a mason and builder who lived on Crescent St. just up the hill from here is the probable builder. His own residence is of brick with similar detailing. There are also two brick duplex houses on this street that Mr. Lynch probably constructed.
