9. Historical significance (include explanation of themes checked above)

This two and a half story house was most likely built during the mid 1880's for John White, a laborer. It features a vertical board frieze and fish-scale shingles in the front gable. A one-story bay window projects from the western side, while a one-story porch extends across the facade. The porch is composed of square posts, cut-out brackets and a low balustrade with turned spindles.
